TEACHING

Assistant Professor, Department of Leadership Studies, University of Central Arkansas, 2014 to present

Regularly teach graduate courses in the College Student Personnel Services & Administration (CSPA) program. Conduct research on higher education and student programs. Coordinate Alumni affairs for the program.

Adjunct Instructor, Department of Leadership Studies, University of Central Arkansas, 2012-2014

Adjunct Instructor, Schedler Honors College, University of Central Arkansas, 2007-2018

Adjunct Instructor, Undergraduate Studies, University of Central Arkansas, 2006-2007

Adjunct Instructor, University College, University of Central Arkansas, 2002

GRADUATE COURSES TAUGHT

American Higher Education (CSPA 6310): The historical development of American higher education against the background of political, social, economic, cultural and intellectual issues will be examined from its founding to the present for contemporary application.

Budgeting (CSPA 6318): The course is designed to provide a broad overview of budgeting and finance in order to improve student's understanding of how budgeting affects decisions. This course will introduce the nature and character of public sector/non-profit organization budgeting, how managers can more effectively use such information, and the limitations associated with such information.

Financing Higher Education (CSPA 6318): This course offers a broad overview of university governance and higher education funding intended to improve the student's understanding of how budgeting affects decisions. Student Personnel Administrators, regardless of the level of bureaucracy, must deal with a variety of budgetary and revenue information when making daily decisions. Understanding the sources of income and expenditures at play within the institution is important to being an effective leader. This course will introduce types of funds used to finance higher education as well as types of budgeting practices. This course will provide students with a general understanding of the process of identifying both traditional and grant funding sources, as well as matching needs with resources, from the public, private, and non-profit sectors.

Internship (CSPA 6370): This course provides the student with the opportunity to apply knowledge about student development offices in institutions of higher education. Student will work as part of a functioning office or service and will be considered part of the team integral to the accomplishment of that entity's mission. Experiences are cooperatively planned and guided by university personnel.

Practicum (CSPA 6365): This course provides student with an on-site professional learning experience in a specific college or university office. The course combines weekly work responsibilities under the supervision of a site supervisor with assigned readings and scheduled discussion meetings with other practicum students and the professor.

UNDERGRADUATE COURSES TAUGHT

- Honors Core III (HONC 2310): The Diversity of the Search. An interdisciplinary study of a non-Western culture through a critical study of its art, economics, history, geography, religion, or a study of race and ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, socioeconomic status or cultural pluralism in some form. Emphasis on research skills.
- Honors Special Topics (HONC 3115): Readings and discussions in specific areas of study that are of particular interest to the student.
- Honors Junior Seminar (HONC 3310): An in-depth study of a selected topic. Emphasis on the presentation of seminar papers.
- Honors Special Topics (HONC 3315): Readings and discussions in specific areas of study that are of particular interest to the student.
- Honors Senior Seminar (HONC 4310): An in-depth study of a selected topic with a global studies emphasis. Open only to senior Honors College Scholars. Emphasis on the presentation of seminar papers and the art of collaboration.
- First Year Freshman Seminar (FYFS 1300): This course is designed to introduce first-year students to the aims and activities of higher education, to advance their theoretical and practical knowledge, to empower them for academic and life success, and to encourage them to engage in service to the local community.
- University Studies (UNIV 1100): This course is designed to aid students in being successful at a collegiate level as well as in their personal lives. There are two primary goals: (1) Empower students to become successful learners at the collegiate level. (2) Empower students to develop a realistic sense of themselves as healthy citizens in a university, professional, public and global community.
