RE: Tom Gibb's sculpture

DATE: September 11, 2009

Per our discussion about repairs to the Tom Gibbs's sculpture Song of the Earth at the Public Art Committee meeting last week, I was able to locate in my files a copy of an e-mail from Mr. Gibbs to Gayle regarding repair to the sculpture (attached). While it is not specifically mentioned, I think it appears to be in regards to the looseness of the granite slab we discussed.

Because Robby Burton is involved with maintenance for sculptures on campus, I am copying this to him also.

In the same file, I found another document (also attached) regarding another sculpture owned by the university (apparently with a water feature) by the artist Mark Stasz. My own notes detailing a conversation with Ken Burchett in December 2004 show that the piece was installed at the entrance to the ball fields on the south part of the campus.
