ASSURANCE OF LEARNING IN THE COLLEGE OF BUSINESS

Assurance of learning (AOL) is a critical component of achieving the mission of the College of Business at the University of Central Arkansas. AOL activities are designed to measure the student learning outcomes upon completion of specific aspects of the curriculum by students. The learning goals that are measured are determined by the mission of the college of business which is directly tied to the university mission. The faculty of the college of business determines the learning goals and the curriculum to achieve these learning goals based on their knowledge and research of the skills needed to be successful in their fields, along with feedback from the business community about the desired skills and knowledge that employers are looking for in a new graduate.

Student learning outcomes are measured directly within the classroom setting through assessment activities. Even though direct measures of assessment occur within the classroom, assessment should not be viewed as measuring any one instructor's teaching capability. Often assessment of specific learning goals may occur in a capstone course even though the skills are learned at an earlier point in the student's studies. For example, very few business courses teach basic writing skills. The basic skills are developed in the general education writing courses, or possibly even before the student reaches the university. The faculty member in a writing intensive course at the senior level is not going to teach basic grammar. The focus changes to incorporating these skills in a way that is appropriate to discipline. However, the assessment measurement will incorporate both the basic grammar skills as well as the more advanced skill of usage and language choice appropriate to the discipline. The assessment measurement is holistic in the sense that it is measuring overall writing skills learned in a variety of classes.

Direct assessment of learning outcomes looks at a specific learning goal or skill that is desired in an ideal graduate. For this reason it is generally not appropriate to use an assignment grade or a course grade to measure student learning or skills from an assessment viewpoint. In assigning a grade to a student, faculty members are generally measuring a wide variety of skills. The grade for a paper written in a capstone course will incorporate written communication skills but also content specific to the discipline. Assessment would break this grade down to identify how well the student demonstrates written communication and discipline specific knowledge as two separate items. The overall grade on the assignment is not a good assessment measure because it does not breakout the individual skills. If students are demonstrating a strong grasp of the knowledge but lacking in written communication skills, assessment activities and measures need to identify the deficient area and look at curricular changes to address the deficiency.

Indirect measures of assessment may also occasionally be considered in a strong AOL culture. Faculty insight into the changing business environment is needed to keep the curriculum current and responsive to industry needs. Feedback from the business community on the quality of our graduates, changes in the skill set needed of new employees, and changes in industry practices needs to be incorporated in the curriculum as well. In particular during the mission review process and subsequent review of learning goals, business community feedback provides a critical element of the review process.

A strong AOL culture enables the college of business to assess overall student learning and identify places where curricular changes may need to be made to better prepare our graduates for the work force or graduate education. Assessment by itself is not enough, the college has to grow and develop by taking the information gained from assessment and closing the loop by adopting curricular change to better achieve the desired learning goals. Continuous improvement with an innovative and dynamic curriculum and learning environment will be the ultimate outcome of the assessment process.

OUR LEARNING GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

The current Learning Goals and Objectives of the UCA College of Business were developed during the spring and summer of 2011. While assurance of learning has a long and well-developed history at UCA, it was determined that our goals and objectives were due to be reconsidered. In response to this, a concerted effort by faculty, students, administrators, advisory board members and other stakeholders developed the following learning goals and objectives for our three distinct degree programs. These learning goals and objectives flow directly from the COB's Vision, Mission, and Values statement that was formally adopted on July 15, 2011. The three distinct programs are the BBA, the MBA, and the MAcc, and their associated learning goals are presented in this plan.

THE ASSURANCE OF LEARNING PROCESS

The assessment process in the College of Business is designed to efficiently and effectively gather data, analyze data, disseminate information, make necessary curricular changes, and evaluate the changes that are made. The process is documented and filed with the Director of Assessment using CAC Form 2 (see Appendix A).

Data Collection

Each semester, the director of assessment emails all faculty members who have assurance of learning activities in their courses to remind them of their responsibilities. These faculty members are responsible for using the pre-approved techniques and documents listed in this handbook in order to assess the performance of the students in these courses. Upon evaluating the performance of their students using these pre-determined techniques, faculty report the results of their assessment activities to the Director of Assessment no later than the day on which grades are due for that semester.

Data Analysis

The Director of Assessment is responsible for organizing the data presented by the faculty and performing an initial analysis of the data to determine the extent to which the benchmarks for the tested learning objectives were achieved.

Data Dissemination

Upon completion of the initial analysis of the data, the Director of Assessment then sends the results to the members of the Curriculum and Assessment Committee. The members of the CAC then meet with the faculty in their department to discuss the results and possible curricular changes. At this point, the Director Assessment also makes arrangements for soliciting input from external stakeholders.

Resulting Actions/Closing the Loop

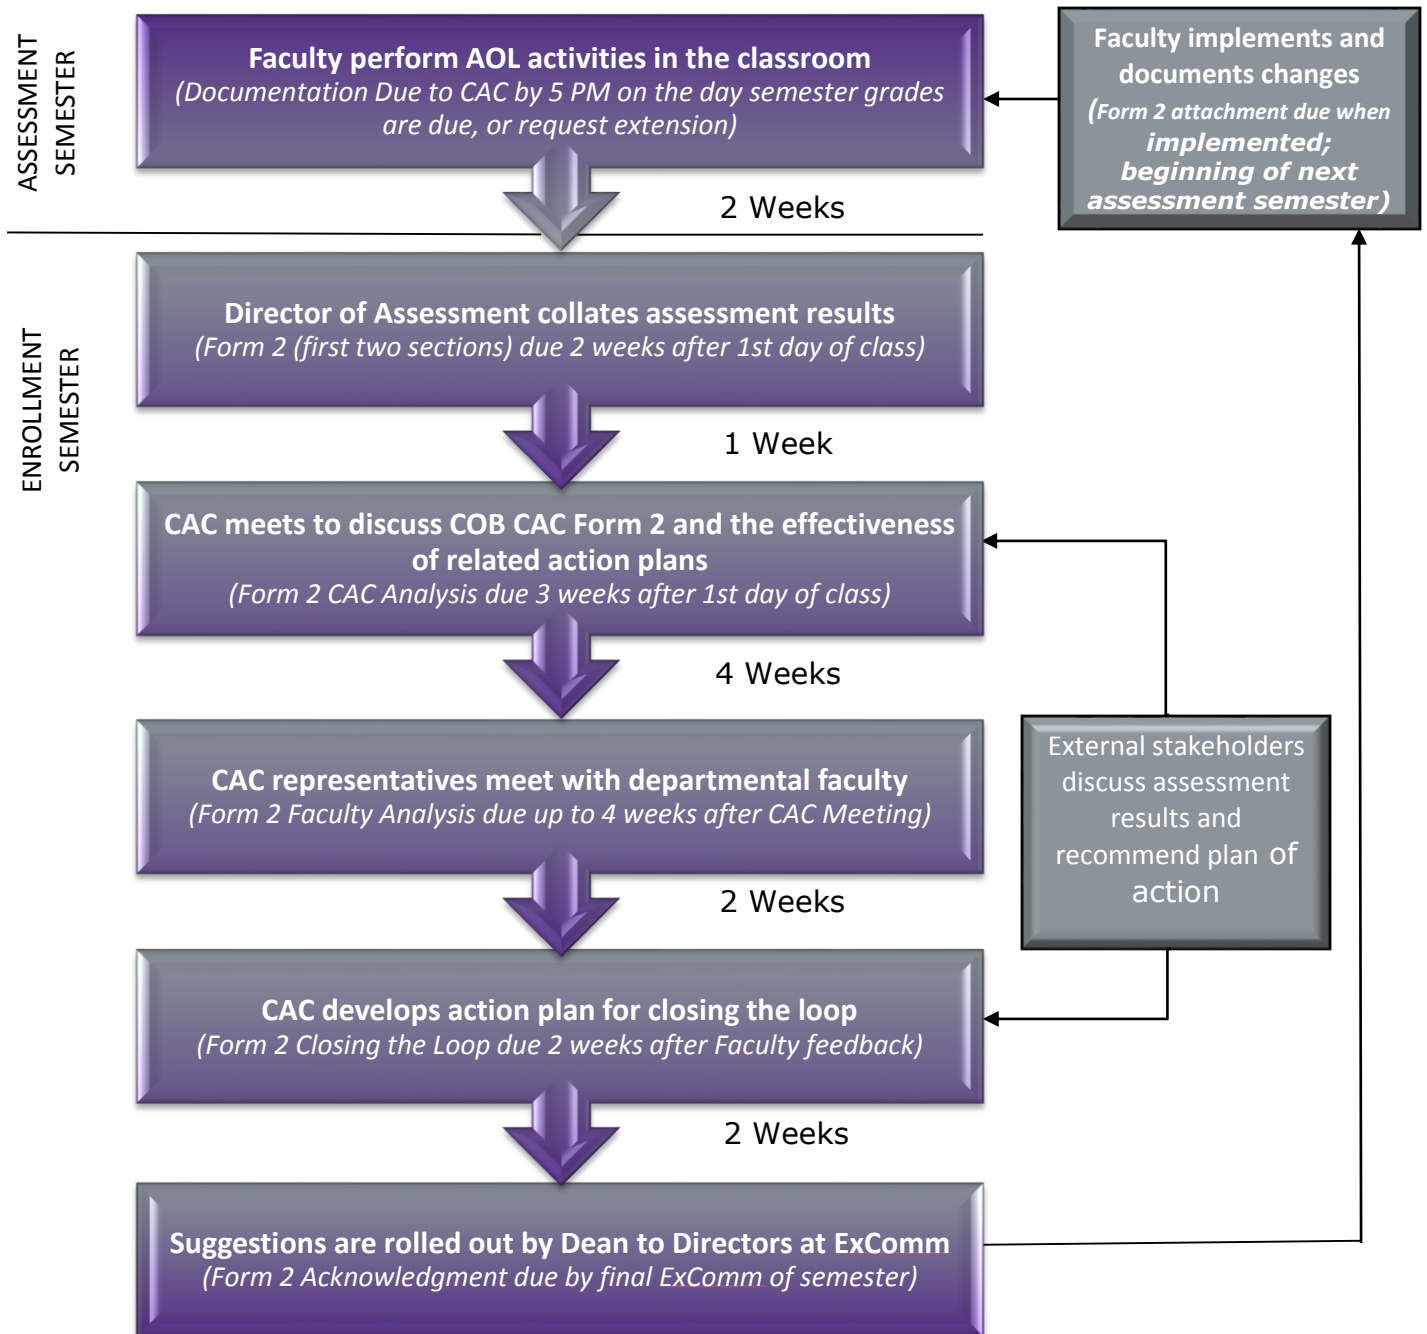

After faculty and stakeholder meetings concerning the AOL results, CAC members collate the faculty responses and present them at appropriate CAC meeting. At this CAC meeting, members will consider curricular changes suggested by the faculty as presented on CAC Form 1 (see appendix), in addition to considering other possible curricular changes. Changes recommended by the CAC will then be forward to the relevant Department Chairs, and the Executive Committee, for approval and implementation. The entire process is documented through the use of CAC Form 2.

When deemed necessary by the CAC input on suggested curricular change may be solicited from the scheduled meetings of advisory groups and student leaders.

Evaluation of Actions Taken

The structure of the assurance of learning system at the UCA College of Business assures that the impact of curricular changes may be easily assessed. The impact of these changes as they pertain to the relevant learning objectives will be assessed in the first semester following the implementation of these changes. The data related to these changes will then be disseminated and analyzed according the procedure outlined below.

DIAGRAM of the ANNUAL ASSESSMENT CYCLE

LEARNING GOALS AND OBJECTIVES ROTATION AND AOL PROCEDURES

The CAC acknowledges that not all learning goals can practically be assessed each year, and that the college's learning goals/objectives, and the overall assessment process should be reviewed regularly. These assessment processes will operate on biennial, quinquennial, and decennial cycles. Therefore, the biennial and decennial processes will be synchronized, as will the quinquennial and decennial processes. The biennial and quinquennial processes will not perfectly synchronize. The CAC chose five- and ten-year cycles to be consistent with the AACSB re-accreditation cycle and with the University's strategic planning cycle. The biennial "Learning Objective" process's two-year interval was chosen as the best compromise between maintaining relevance and currency in the Learning Objectives while giving due consideration to the longer term strategic processes.

BIENNIAL CYCLE:

Reviewing the Learning Goals

The CAC anticipates that the CoB shall have set 8-12 Learning Objectives at all times. However, not all Learning Objectives shall be assessed every semester. In general, no more and no less than four Learning Objectives shall be assessed each semester. Learning Objectives shall, therefore, rotate into and out of direct assessment. Each time a particular Learning Objective is assessed, the CAC will recommend:

1. Continue to assess next assessment period
2. Continue to assess next assessment period with programmatic change (see below)
3. Rotate out of assessment

In general, a Learning Objective shall be assessed for four consecutive semesters (two years, in those cases where the class is offered every semester). Adjustments will be to the timeline to accommodate classes offered only in certain semesters. If a Learning Objective is satisfied (Assessment threshold is met or exceeded) for three out of the four assessment periods, then (a) CAC Form 2 shall be marked "Rotate out of Assessment" after the final active assessment semester; (b) that Learning Objective will then drop out of the active assessment cycle (the Annual Cycle) to the bottom of the Learning Objective "queue."

However, if a Learning Objective is not satisfied for three out of four assessment periods, then (a) the faculty will use CAC Forms 1 & 2 to document changes intended to permit students to satisfy the Learning Objective; (b) the Learning Objective will remain in the active assessment cycle until the Learning Objective is satisfied for three out of the four assessment semesters in the next biennial cycle. In addition, if the CAC decides that a learning goal needs to remain in the queue for a particular assessment cycle due to strategic initiatives or curricular importance, the committee can, at its discretion, leave a learning goal in its position in the learning queue for the next biennial cycle.

CONCLUDING REMARKS

Assurance of learning (AOL) is a critical component of achieving the mission of the College of Business at the University of Central Arkansas. A strong AOL culture enables the college of business to assess overall student learning and identify places where curricular changes may need to be made to better prepare our graduates for the work force or graduate education. Assessment by itself is not enough, the college has to grow and develop by taking the information gained from assessment and closing the loop by adopting curricular change to better achieve the desired learning goals. Continuous improvement with an innovative and dynamic curriculum and learning environment will be the ultimate outcome of the assessment process. Thank you for your cooperation in this important process!
