Department of Communication
Sciences and Disorders

Program Overview

The UCA Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders invites children who stutter to participate in the Summer Fluency Program. The summer program is designed to provide speech services to school-age children who stutter. It is specifically geared toward children who need to manage their stuttering and enhance fluency in both learning and recreational activities.

The program will feature:

- * individual and group therapy sessions
- * fluency assessment and recommendations for home programs
- * fluency enhancing activities
- * recreational activities to help transfer fluency skills outside the clinic

Additionally, for the older children, the program will feature:

- Overcoming a Stuttering Frame of Mind
- Building Self-Confidence
- Developing Good Communication Techniques
- Dealing with Teasing

The sessions will offer students experiences to improve and manage their fluency through high-energy, low-stress, fun-filled activities.

Graduate students from the UCA Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders will provide leadership for program. Supervision for this program will be provided by certified speech-language pathologists who have had extensive experience in the assessment and treatment of stuttering.
